

Wind power

Wind turbines spin around to make electricity around the world where ever there is wind .

A wind farm usesthewind to spin the blades oft he turbine.This generates electricity.

Electricity travels the speed of light – that's more than 300,000 kilometres per second. If you could move that fast, you'd be able to go around the world eight times in the time it takes you to flip on a light switch.